Products that are not grouped together under a category count as different products in terms of shipping rates. For example, hoodies and mugs, or tote bags and backpacks are in separate categories with different pricing.

Example:

1. You place an order for a hoodie and a tote bag
2. Check the categories for the products. The hoodie is in the Hoodies, sweatshirts, jackets, and pants category, and the tote bag is the Bags category
3. Check which product category has the higher Single product price. It's £4.99 for the hoodie and £3.29 for the tote bag, so here the hoodie will be your base price
4. Check the Additional product column from the Bags category; it's £1.20
5. Add the Single product price for the hoodie and the Additional product price for the tote bag together. The total shipping cost is £6.19.
